On the other hand, in Italy regionalism means federalism but is the antonym of “nationalism”. Federalism is well-defined as the distribution of power in a government among a central authority and the component units; this is criminal behavior and is thus the complete opposite of nationalism.

Western Europe is identified as marble cake federalism, which differs from this outlook as it supports the notion that central governments and regional states essentially engage in power-sharing (O'Toole, 2007). The marble cake analogy is used to describe cooperative federalism because it represents a system where there is a mixture of power usage at local and state levels.
